Rabbit Aby Cadabra is new in Magician Ostrich's magic hat.

And it certainly feels too cramped for him in there with all the other animals waiting for the show all day long. So Aby decides to get out for some fresh air. The only other animals daring to join him into the forest are the chicks. Of course, Magician Ostrich doesn't find this funny at all when he finds out and he sends his two "watchdogs", the pigeons Pick and Nick, to catch the rabbit again. It's a good thing that Aby nibbled off a piece of the magic wand before his escape, because these magic powers help him in every dicey situation. He can let it rain blueberries when the runaways need a snack and he turns Pick and Nick into ever-hungry goats. For now, they are safe, but Magician Ostrich is determined to catch them again!

Aby Cadabra and the chicks are still on the run from Magician Ostrich and his pigeon-helpers, Pick and Nick.

Two detectives are now after them: an elephant and a cat disguised as a dog. The elephant follows Aby Cadabra in the city. Aby finally sneaks into a store full of porcelain but the huge elephant doesn't fit into the alleys and ends up breaking everything. The "dog" detective finds the chicks at a tennis court for dogs, and manages to escape with the chicks just when the dogs notice that detective "dog" is actually a cat. By a mean plan they get Aby Cadabra into a warehouse. Can he free the chicks and continue his adventures as a free rabbit?

While little spider Carl is stealing Christmas cookies from his six siblings, fly Bisy is an only child spoiled by his helicopter parents. Even though Carl and Bisy don't know each other yet, they have one thing in common: both are eagerly awaiting Christmas Eve. And they both want to find out whether the other insects also celebrate. Whilst Bisy secretly takes the presents from under the flies' Christmas tree and dresses up like Santa to go to the spiders' home, little spider Carl does exactly the same as his aunt Cassandra claimed that uncultivated animals like flies wouldn't celebrate Christmas. But a spider in a flies' home should never lose its disguise and a fly in a spiders' home even less. Before they know it, the two fake Santas are in danger of getting caught...

Kai Pannen is the author of the bestselling SPIDER & FLY series and of further numerous titles. He is author, illustrator and makes animated films. He was awarded the PREUSCH-HOF PRIZE for Children's Literature.

ages 10 +
publication date: 27.08.2025

Ten-year-old Smilla loves beetles more than anything and can talk about them for hours. Her classmates don't understand her passion at all. But Smilla is not only bullied by them because of her special interest, but also because she is clumsy and often has outbursts of anger. Luckily, there is an abandoned red house in the neighbourhood. It has an overgrown garden where Smilla can just be herself. Her life changes abruptly though when she meets YouTuber and influencer JayJay, who has also discovered this place for himself. After initial attempts to drive each other away, they eventually get to know each other better. When an investor wants to buy the abandoned property and demolish the red house, they make a plan. And in doing so, Smilla's knowledge of beetles gives them an unexpected advantage.

Dust has a bad reputation. How unfair! As dust is a true miracle substance that gives us the most beautiful sunsets, that makes it rain or conjures up artistic snowflakes. Dust particles in the ice in Antarctica can tell us about the climate thousands of years ago and fine dust can help to find criminals. Did you know that you can find desert dust even in the oceans where it serves as nutrient for microscopic marine plants? Or that pens for drawing and colours for painting have dusts as a basis? There is even a special kind of dust that can make water drinkable!

Silke Schlichtmann grew up on an orchard near Hamburg. Today she lives in Munich. Before she started writing stories, she worked as a scientist and editor.

Maja Bohn graduated in communication design from the Berlin Weissensee School of Arts. She has been working as a freelance illustrator and author for children's and school books ever since. She lives in Berlin.

Ten cheeky rabbits hop across the green grass, ready to nibble on carrots, but when the gardener comes, they're all gone! And it's not just the rabbits that are audacious. Whether it's nine goats too lazy to get on their feet, eight ring-necked pigeons trying to steal a hat, seven toads pretending to be good musicians – they are all cheeky and run away in the end. Can the little boy lure them all out of their hiding places again?

Fox wants to find a female fox to travel with.

But as soon as he goes out of his den, he is distracted: by a ladder leading to a monkey's house up in the forest. Together, they meet a raven and start travelling. The travel group gets bigger and bigger and together the animals pass a snowy forest, a jungle, the highest mountain and the deepest cave – and are finally spat out by a waterfall in the end – close to a place that seems strangely familiar to Fox. Indeed, he is back home! And bumps into Mrs. Fox who happens to live right next to Foxe's den!

There is rumbling and gurgling and bubbling in Amelinskaya and her grandmother Polly when they are not together. They even feel dizzy when one is without the other. So they decide to seek out a specialist. Professor Doctor Fender Bender examines them thoroughly. And after treating them according to the latest scientific findings, he makes his diagnosis while Amelinskaya and Grandma are floating in a barrel filled with sand and sugar syrup: They have magnetitis! But what is that actually? Amelinskaya and her grandmother have magnetic blood. They are simply attracted to each other. There is nothing else to do about it but rejoice from the bottom of your heart!

Aibi, her brother and the other children of the village are relieved that the days of constantly moving around, hunting and gathering are finally over. They have a permanent home and even keep some wild goats and sheep, all of which they know by name. When the goat Cloud Dancer is to be roasted for a big festival, the children can hardly bear it. None of their animals must be slaughtered! So they all get their parents to try something new: a purely vegetarian feast! But grown-ups are hard to convince, so the children make up a rule: Animals with a name must not be slaughtered. Too bad for the grown ups that the children make up names for the wild animals around them, too!

The animal world is full of amazing beings: reptiles that change color, fish that glow, whales that sing. But some have become famous as an individual animal, leaving us humans in awe. Have you heard of Koko, a female gorilla who learnt the meaning of more than 1000 signs and 2000 English words? Or the exceptional dog Bobby, who got lost during a family's holiday in the 1920s and walked back more than 4.000 km in the course of about half a year? Or Tama, a cat that was sitting by a Japanese train station regularly and that the railway company thus declared station master which resulted in tourism for the remote area and big gains for the railway company?

Marion Goedelt tells the stories of eleven of these extraordinary animals which have become famous because of unique abilities, curious circumstances, or special relationships with people.

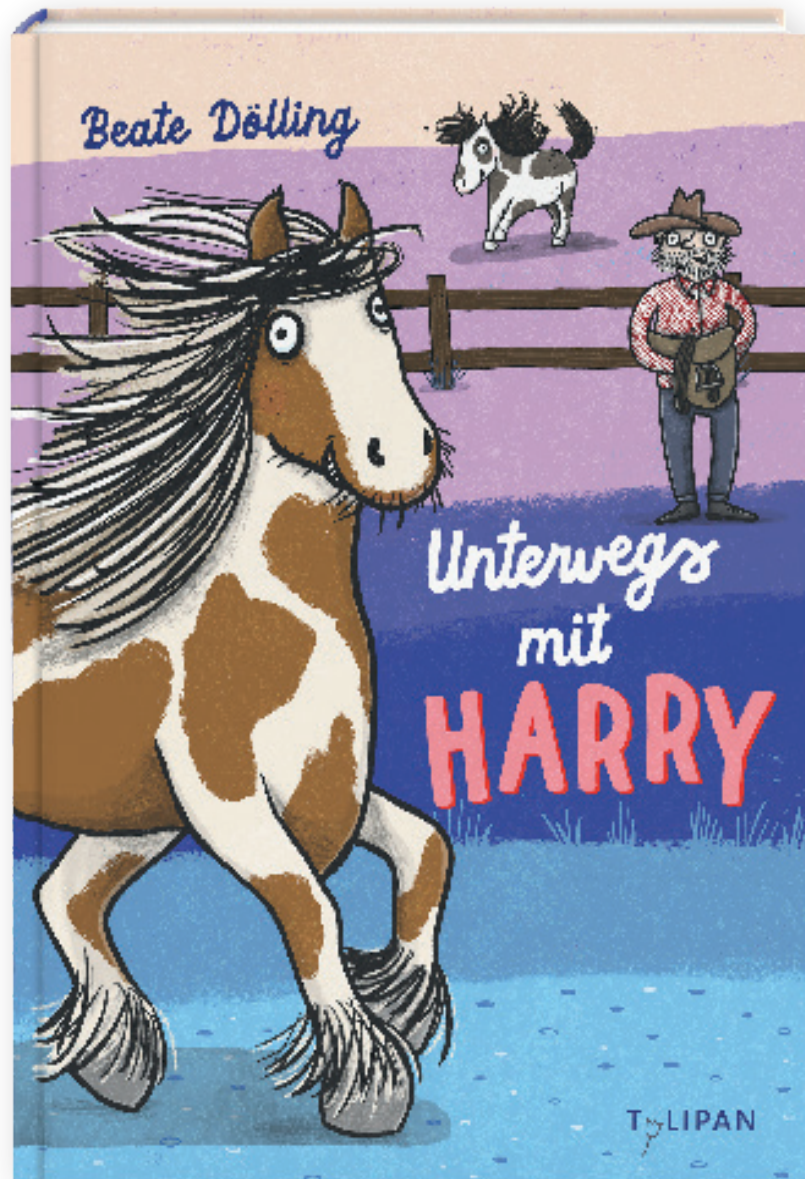

Marion Goedelt works as a freelance illustrator for various publishers. She illustrates picture books and children's books, some of which have been published by Tulipan, as well as school books, fiction covers and websites. Her books have been translated into several languages.

Harry, the horse, and Helmut, the human, have been close friends for many years. As Helmut wants to surprise his grandson Ben for his 10th birthday, they go on a road trip across the country. After all, Ben spent many years with Harry before he and his mother moved far away. During their journey, Harry and Helmut bump into all kinds of funny situations: One time, Harry serves as a romantic horse for a wedding, another time he secretly eats pasta out of a pot as he is just too hungry. He replaces a vaulting horse in a competition and forces Helmut to swim as he is scared of bridges. The biggest challenge though is horse Bag whom they meet on the way. She falls in love with Harry and they just cannot shake her off any more. As they arrive, the surprise for Ben is a full success – until Harry gets the idea that Ben “replaced” him with a dog. After an initial feeling of jealousy, they all celebrate together. And Helmut? He has two horses now!

The new semester couldn't have started any better:

Evaline Darkling and her friends Sophia, Poppy, and Juli move into the trophy room. But all too soon their joy is dampened when school principal Miranda van der Pest announces bad news: The city has terminated the school's lease. The building is to be sold to Maximilian Posel, who claims that he would like to turn the school in a residence for poor artists. Naturally, all the children are horrified and want to prevent losing their school at all costs. But after Posel visits for the first time, principal Miranda van der Pest is like a different person — she falls in love for the first time — with Posel! She blindly believes him, when Evaline and her friends have noticed that something is certainly wrong here. So the school kids take matters into their own hands and forge a plan.

Vivien has no time to meet her friends Firuz, JJ and Enna.

She is worried about her mother who is struggling with unemployment and alcoholism. When one day Enna bumps into Vivien though, the two friends suddenly find some blood on the ground at the entrance of the apartment block. The trace leads to the Brautigams' apartment. Apparently, Mr. Brautigam had an affair. Could it be that his wife took revenge? Or did Veit, the cool and distanced guy from next door do something to his aggressive father? The friends follow clue after clue. Until they finally find out: Veit's mother fled from her aggressive husband. Mrs. Brautigam is known for helping out other women in trouble. So that is where Veit's mother went to get support. Another case solved!
